GRADUATE PROGRAMS IN THE COLLEGE OF GRADUATE STUDIES

The College of Graduate Studies at UBC’s Okanagan campus gives students opportunities to explore their research interests, discover new innovations, and learn by working within a rich, collaborative, research-focused environment.

The College provides oversight and support for graduate programs and works in collaboration with departments, academic units, schools, and facilities to coordinate and maintain the quality of master’s and doctoral programs.

UBC is consistently ranked among the Top 40 universities in the world, and one of the Top 3 universities in Canada. Located in Kelowna, BC, the Okanagan campus offers the outstanding UBC educational experience with the advantages of a close-knit campus, providing graduates with a globally recognized UBC degree.
GRADUATE PROGRAMS

UBC’s Okanagan campus offers more than 14 graduate degree programs, including an Interdisciplinary Graduate Studies program.

In Interdisciplinary Graduate Studies (IGS), students may choose to complete either a themed option or individualized program. The IGS program allows students the opportunity to combine fields of study of their choosing into one degree at either the master’s or doctoral level. Themed options allow the student to further their education in a particular area. Individualized Options allow the student to be flexible and pursue their own interests.
